Chapter 1 by Isabella Schmidt

When I got to the stadium I was excited. The Royals first game and I got to go. I wasn't going alone though. I had my best friend there with me. Once we got to our seats I realized how close we were to the field. I asked him how he got the seats and he whispered to me that Salvador Perez is in catcher position warming up I look and there is my favorite baseball team. Warming up and getting ready for the big game. This game determines if the Royals can get another win on their first game or go back to their losing streak.

The ump calls play ball. The Met's are up to bat first. The first batter swings and misses and that is how it's like for the next two guys. When the Royals come up to bat Alcides Escobar is up. He swings and hits it into right field. The crowd goes crazy. I cover my ears because the noise is too loud for me. The next two players hit the ball and get on base. My favorite player was up next. Eric Hosmer misses the ball. He misses the ball again and on the third swing he hits it into the outfield and it keeps going and going until it's hit out of the park.
